In his order approving the sentence of dismissal imposed by court-martial in the case of Military Cadets Giles Bishop and H. S. Commager, convicted of hazing the President uses the following emphatic language: "The offense of maltreating and abusing new cadets by upper classmen is so mean and cowardly, and so opposed to every trait that should characterize a gentleman and a true soldier, that severe punishment should not be necessary for its prevention. If, how-ever, punishment must be resorted to to effect a discontinuance of this disgraceful practice, I can do no less than to resist all appeals for clemency. • • I am determined in all cases of this description, when the proof is clear, to refuse relief to those cadets who, in violation of a wholesome regulation of the Military Academy, indulge in the brutal and cowardly treatment of beginners, commonly called hazing."

Summer days are waning in spite of the had been sick for several days, and with fact that we have just passed through promptitude Sergt. Volkman summoned the patrol wagon, and had the man taken to Here the unfortunate young man did not tell the physicians that he had attempted to end his existence. On the contrary he stated that he had eaten something which did not agree with him, a true but rather ghastly joke. The symptoms of his case were those of poisoning, and it was only by hard work that the doctors found out what the young man had done. The stomach pump was applied, but the deadly drug had gotten too great a hold, though the life of the young man was slightly pro-longed. The physicians worked all of the afternoon on the young man, but death ended his sufferings shortly after 6 o'clock. The dying agonies of the suicide must have extremely painful, yet he did not The suicide was about thirty years of age, and had been an orphan since he was ten years of age. His people were well Mr. Harry Payne Whitney will take place as arranged, amid the closing days of the known in town some years ago. In the pockets of the dead man were found several letters, one addressed to his aunt, Mrs. Chappalear, at Ballston, Va.; another to Mrs. Wheeler, at Indian Head, and a third to Mrs. Wm. One of the leading fads this summer at the resorts has been collecting monograms and crests from stationery. Anybody with a swell correspondence or having a friend fortunate in this regard was an object of envy. Besides arranging them in books, fans were decorated with them and other similar uses were found by inventive minds and busy fingers. The monograms and crests from members of foreign embassies and legations were of course, only to be had by the favored few and so interesting did this search become that the heads of the Makes; Dusiness paper emanating from these sources were highly treasured. Some of the monograms of Washington ladies are really very pretty, while those who use rests, large and small, score a point highor in this game. Possibly of those in private life Mrs. Hearst has a more costly monogram than any other lady in Washington. Her note paper has her initials prettily entwined in silver on a raised purple disk, not as large as a silver three-cent piece. Each separate one is painted, and it is here that the cost comes in.

Nevertheless, she is absent-minded, and not always to be relied upon. On arriving at the house they laid aside their wraps and entered the drawing room, where nearly all the guests were assembled. Those closest noticed there was more surprise than pleasure in the manner of the hostess, although it was skillfully disguised in the conventional phrases which passed between them. Some one then engaged her attention and the hostess, in an undertone, to one of the men guests, said: "Will you do me the greatest favor? Allow me the honor of giving a dinner for you at your very earliest convenience, but withdraw now. Mr. and Mrs. Blank have made a mistake in coming here tonight, but I can't tell them so ing here tonight, but I can't tell them so, and the table is not big enough for two other guests." TO BE SLIGHTLY WARMER SUNDAY

There was but little change in the condition of the temperature today as compared with yesterday, and, while the direct rays of the sun were almost too warm for protracted exposure to them, there was balm in the breezes that blew with applaudable energy, and the air in the shade was little short of salubrious. The weather bureau experts wore waistcoats this morning for the first time this month, and, while they didn't hold out any prospects of a cold wave it was evident that they were personally very much pleased with prevailing conditions. The morning decree promulgated by Major Dunwoody announced generally fair weather, with a slight rise in temperature temorrow, but a considerable elevation would have to take place before the misery of last Sunday could be repeated. The change night before last, the reduced heat of yesterday, and the cool night that followed, has served to renabilitate almost worn-out systems to a great degree, and life has again become worth living in the full sense of the term. The street crowds

The features of the local wholesale produce market today are the advances in the price of butter and cheese, both products being about a cent a pound higher than they were a week ago. The shrinkage in the finest classes of butter still continues, with indications pointing to a still further advance. Eggs remain unchanged both as to prices and condition, strictly fresh goods being at a premium. Poultry is plentiful, with prices about as they were a week ago. enough heat to supply several summer months, and of which yet all have the liveliest remembrance. Only another fortnight remains, and at the summer cities, where it is necesssary to do a great deal to keep up the record, most of the big events must occur in that period. From the best authority so far, at Newport, where the aggregated millions should induce the greatest stir, there has been, for one reason or another, very little of it, even among those who like it best. Sickness and other troubles have been deterring influences with those who have no reason to werry about political changes. The continued improvement of Mr. Vanderbilt proves that his son's marriage had no untoward effect on his health, and his appearance out driving indicates that the marriage of Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt and

He spent the early summer in some quiet spot, inasmuch as he was not quoted at any of the fashion able resorts, but is now in the thick of the fray at Bar Harbor, where he is well known and one of the most welcome vis-ltors that place boasts. Should his successor postpone his coming to this country for several years neither Mavroyeni Bey nor his admirers would object in the least,

Father the idea of barefoot walks in the dew, has had wonderful success in the cures he has wrought among those suffering from rheu-matic and kindred disorders. Some months to this country to give practical direction and illustration of the system, but the idea has started and has become widespread, even without the presence of its discoverer and foremost exponent. The German nobil-ity was among the first to follow and to feel the benefits of the treatment. In New York the discussion whether or not the devotees emy. We shall probably stay there for a week or ten days, then f shall return to of the cure would be allowed to walk over the dewy lawns at Central Park, has raged for months. In Baltimore the past week a number of persons commenced the system in Druid Hill Park, and the authorities give the new idea, if not their sanction, at least a smiling non-interference. In this city with its numerous parks, there is simply no limit to the opportunities, except the prohibitory warning, "Keep off the grass." The veracious chroniclers of events, past future and imaginative, at the various summer resorts have insisted the past month that the carly morning grass walk has been a leading fad at these places, es-pecially for those who had reason to feel esque effects. It is something new under the sun anyway, and in that light may be-come the pastime of West End society.
